Presentations about Formula Student, the team and group specific question rounds.

Formula Student is the world's largest international design competition among student teams. Every year, hundreds of teams come together at the most famous racetracks around the globe to compete in a variety of disciplines with their self-developed racing cars. In total there are more than 900 teams competing in the three competition classes combustion, electric and driverless.

A year after the first European Formula Student competition took place, a few students from the RWTH Aachen got together and founded our team, Ecurie Aix. Since then, with members from many different fields of study, we have been striving to build ever faster, lighter and better performing race cars. Nowadays, we built one electric and one autonomous car every year.

We're looking forward to get to know you. For more information visit our website: www.ecurie-aix.de
